STORIES OF THE PIONEERS.

II.

JOHN W. COOK.

They are rapidly passing from the scene of action, those picturesque characters who played such a conspicuous part in the tragic scenes of pioneer life; blazed the trails through forest, plain and desert, sought out the mountain passes, climbed the heights and found the valleys, fought hunger and thirst, wild beasts and wilder men and made easy the way for the generations to come.

At his home on San Fernando road, Tropic, waiting for nature to work repairs to a broken leg that was hit by the machinery of a gasoline engine, five weeks ago, the reporter found Mr. John W. Cook, who, although incapacitated at present, promises to be at work with old time vigor in another month.

Mr. Cook was born at Wheeling, W. Va., in 1836, and was taken to Texas while an infant. He struck out from there in 1855 for Arizona and Mexico, where he spent a year or two, principally in that section known as "The Gadsden Purchase," extending from Yuma on the west to the New Mexican line, and from Maricopa south to Mexico. He spent nine months at the Presidio at Santa Cruz, then in the Independent State of Sonora. He was the only American at the Presidio during the most of this time, and it proved to be about the liveliest nine months of his career. Santa Cruz was surrounded by a wall as a defense against the Indians, who infested the mountains in the vicinity and were in the habit of swooping down upon the little Mexican settlement every twenty-eight days (at full moon), with the regularity of clock work.

The moonlight was needed in their business, which consisted in running off cattle and other stock, and in robbing and murdering such bands of emigrants as they could take by surprise, or by greatly outnumbering them. When these forays occurred the Mexicans retired within the walls and the Indians had things pretty much their own way on the outside; an exchange of shots would take place, but fatalities were small, not numerous on either side. The Mexicans were very poorly armed, having usually antiquated blunderbusses with flaring muzzles, called scopetenas, which were capable of belching forth fire, smoke and a promiscuous assortment of slugs and things, but were not dangerous to the object aimed at, unless very close at hand. The Indians generally had better arms and some of them were good shots. Speaking of this subject, Mr. Cook relates the following incident: A party of miners had come to the Presidio and one of them, named Green, was quarreled with Mr. Cook. When the usual full moon attack occurred, Mr. Cook was assigned to sentry duty on the wall, which was about eight feet wide on top. Turning to Green he said:

"I'm going on guard Green; do you want to go with me?"

"You bet, that's the kind of a picnic I want," replied Green, and the two proceeded to their station on the wall. There were two noticeable things Mr. Green. He wore a tall bell-crowned blue hat, and had a rifle of remarkable length. It was daylight and not an Indian was visible, the scene being as peaceful as it is possible to picture it. Here and there patches of cactus broke the regularity of the ground. Other sentries were on the walls, and the two carefully scanned the landscape. Then out of the silence rang the crack of a rifle and a little cloudlet of smoke was seen to rise from a cactus patch 150 yards or more distant. Green slowly took off his old bell-crowned hat, looked ruefully at a hole in the center of it, felt of a newly plowed furrow through his scalp, where the bullet had grazed his head, and remarked:

"Well, that was a pretty blamed good shot. I'd like to see the fellow that did it."

"Watch that bunch of cactus off yonder, maybe you can get a sight of him," said Cook.

Then, in relating the story, Mr. Cook said, "Well, that rifle was the longest one I ever saw; Green raised it to his shoulder and pointed it toward the cactus, and as I watched the muzzle of it, I couldn't see it move a hair's breadth. I don't know how long he held it there; a good while. We couldn't see a motion in the cactus, but by and by the long rifle popped. I couldn't see anything in particular ahead, but Green said: 'Well that was a pretty good shot, loco, let's go and see.'"

We went over to the cactus patch and there was an Indian stretched out dead as a door nail, with a little hole from the old Hawkins rifle plumb in the center of his forehead.

(An interesting story of another adventure of Mr. Cook and how he got an arrow in his leg, will appear in our next issue.)

From Santa Cruz Mr. Cook went to Madelena, in Sonora, where there was a more enlightened class of natives with whom he remained about eighteen months. He was doing very well here until war broke out between Sonora and Mexico, when he was given an ultimatum either to join the army or leave within forty-eight hours. He decided to leave. Meanwhile the government had taken his rifle from him, but had overlooked his revolver, which was the only weapon left him, as he started out for a tramp of 80 miles over the desert to the Gila river. Arriving at Sonita, in Sonora, he procured twelve pounds of panole (a flour made of parched wheat) which was all the food he had for the five days' journey. He finally arrived at the Gila in a state of exhaustion, his moccasins worn out and his feet cut by the weary tramp, so that he lay there by the river for two days until an ox team came along and carried him to Fort Yuma.

Fort Yuma was at this time (1857) was a lively place; the only post of any consequence in the Southwest. Communication was by water with San Francisco, vessels coming down the coast around Cape St. Lucas into the Gulf of California, thence by schooner and steamer up the Colorado to the fort. 150 pounds of potatoes were worth $50.00; flour, one dollar per pound; brown sugar, $1.25 per pound, etc.

Mr. Cook made money there and finally started a ferry over the river. He was doing well when the war broke out. Being Virginia born and Texas bred, he and Uncle Sam had some differences of opinion, which compelled him to give up the ferry business, resulting in his losing nearly all that he had made.

He then, in 1861, came to California, settling near Santa Ana on a government claim. He had promise of good crops and had quite a large number of hogs which were then worth good money, but the freshet of January 18, 1862, came down and swept house, stock and crops away. Immediately after the storm, Mr. Cook came to Los Angeles, crossing the San Gabriel at Puente on a raft. He remembers coming into Los Angeles and finding the water of the Arroyo Seco roaring in its channel at the point where Stetson's cannery now stands on Twenty-eth avenue. He saw another disastrous flood here in 1868, and when Mr. Cook commences to talk about floods, you begin to feel that this is a very uncertain world and you had better not own too much of it. He moved out to the property he still owns (ten acres), on the San Fernando road, in 1878, and the house he built was the only one on that road between Los Angeles and Sepulveda Station. His present residence was built eighteen years ago. For five years Mr. Cook was the janero of the old East Side ditch, which ran from the river above Sepulveda Station, through by Tropic school house and around the base of the hills to the East Side reservoir, a distance of about nine miles.

This ditch was completed in 1877 and was used until 1881. When the trestle over the river was washed away, when it was succeeded by a pipe line. Mr. Cook has been generally successful in his farming operations and at present has his place mostly seeded to alfalfa, getting water from an excellent well on his own property. He was married in 1874 to Miss Margaret Stack. He is still, barring the accident that temporarily disables him, in vigorous health and takes a lively interest in affairs.

CITY TRUSTEES.

All members present, except Mr. Jennings. Demands were referred to the finance committee.

Gustav Schwemer, for lettering rubbish cans, $3.00; J. C. Beigen, rubbish cans, $7.00; Riggs & Sherer, publishing, $7.20; S. Grant, street sprinkling, $117.00; T. W. Doyle, assessing, $101.00.

Demands amounting to $162.25, previously referred to the finance committee, were ordered paid. Warrants in payment of Demands Nos. 246, 247, 248 and 249, were ordered drawn on the general fund and Demand No. 250 was ordered drawn on the Fire Board fund, a total of $200.85.

An estimate from the City Engineer on the cost of improving a portion of Fifth street, from Glendale avenue to Verdugo road, was accepted and filed.

The committee on fire protection reported having investigated thoroughly the matter of hose, recommended the purchase of the New Jersey Car Spring and Rubber Co., as per sample submitted. On motion it was ordered that in accordance with recommendation 1000 feet of 2½-inch hose be purchased at 70 cents per foot.

In regard to petition for improvement of Third street, from Brand boulevard to A street, the city engineer reported a majority of frontage represented on the petition. A petition against said improvement, signed by D. W. Hunt and others, was received and action deferred for one week.

Report was received from the deputy city assessor showing an assessed valuation of $871,940. Received and filed.

A communication was received from the Ganahl Lumber Company requesting the Board to notify the Salt Lake Railway company to keep cars off the alley at the rear of the lumber yard. Clerk was instructed to notify the railroad company to comply with the terms of the ordinance covering this matter.

Request of Geo. B. Mock, contractor, for extension of time for completion of street work on Glendale Avenue, 20 days; on Fourth street, 25 days; and on J street, 30 days; was granted.

A protest was received against the opening of a street from the South city limits to Sycamore road, to be known as "Child's Avenue." Referred to city attorney to report at next meeting. (In last week's issue, this petition was alluded to erroneously, as having been presented at previous Trustees' meeting.)

A petition for the improvement of Brand boulevard, from Sixth street to the southerly city limits, presented February 20th, last, and then referred back to petitioners to secure deeds of dedication to the city, was again received, accompanied by deed and a communication from Ezra F. Parker; the latter was filed, the deed referred to the city attorney and the petition to the city engineer to report on frontage.

Applications from two different parties for licenses to operate a pool-room were laid on the table.

Ordinance Number 51, establishing the grade of Lomita avenue, from the east line of Central avenue to the westerly line of Glendale avenue, passed third and final reading. City engineer was instructed to ascertain, if probable cost of improving this avenue, be sufficient to justify the work being done under the ten-year bond act; the law requiring that the cost shall be fifty cents per foot or more in order to be done under this act. A resolution was passed adopting a map showing improvements on a portion of Fifth street.

A resolution of Intention to improve a portion of Fifth street, was adopted. The city attorney was instructed to prepare a resolution ordering in the work on Fourth street, between Glendale avenue and A street, also on Fifth street, between Glendale avenue and Central avenue.

Salt Lake Railroad Company's Depot

The Salt Lake Railroad Company has a crew of men and several carloads of material on the ground for the new depot building on their property, corner Second street and Glendale avenue. The building will, in the main, be 20x42 feet in dimensions, with a twenty-foot shed and a six-foot platform on two sides. The freight room will be 20x29 feet and the remainder of the building be divided into two office rooms. The building will have a rustic finish and its probable cost will be from $1000 to $1200.

Mr. M. W. Berry is foreman in charge of the work, and except for the inside finishing the building will probably be completed in two weeks.

This is certainly a much needed improvement and we are glad to see this company turning its attention toward Glendale at last.

GLENDALE AT MASONIC HALL.

The officers and members of Unity Lodge, A. F. and A. M., were most agreeably surprised at the close of their session, Tuesday evening, by the members of Glen Eyrre Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, who assembled about 9 o'clock, and with bountiful, though dainty refreshments, awaited the close of the lodge.

Worshipful Master U. A. Thompson and Frank Albright, senior warden, were then invited to escort the members of the lodge to the banquet room, where a most delightful social hour was enjoyed, while discussing the dainty menu.

GLENDALE, CAL., AUGUST 3, 1907

The long-promised special edition of the Valley Independent appeared Saturday. It is a handsome number illustrated profusely, and should do good service in advertising our valley, if well distributed.

Luther Burbank has produced a species of thornless cactus which promises to be a valuable forage plant.

Mr. Burbank still owes the world something for having imposed upon it that sapless, sugarless imitation of a fruit, the Burbank plum.

The acquittal of Haywood in Idaho was practically assured under the judge's instructions. It is a case of "not proved," as far as the jury is concerned, but the innocence of the defendant is far from established, in the minds of citizens generally.

John D. Rockefeller joined a Sunday school fifty-four years ago, and says it was the most important event in his life. This statement ought to swell the attendance at Sunday school even more than does the announcement of the proposed annual picnic with free ice cream.

Sierra Madre has been informed by its attorney, Walter F. Haas, that as long as it has no ordinance bearing on the subject, the municipality can not prevent the sale of liquor within its boundaries.

Trustees of Glendale will please note this fact and hurry up that liquor ordinance.

A Portent of War

One of our exchanges devotes considerable space to telling how a Japanese was discovered a few days ago sitting under a tree and making a sketch of the Cahuenga Valley and vicinity. The astute discoverer sneaked up behind him and peremptorily demanded what he was doing it for, and the Japanese replied with dignity that he was doing merely that which as an individual he had a right to do!

Thus the warlike incident passed without an outbreak between the nations.

When the fool killer goes his rounds we shall expect to hear of him doing some service in the neighborhood of Cahuenga, and the victim will not be a Japanese.

Texas and the Trusts

The Lone Star State is after the trusts, and they are taking to the woods in consequence; at least they are to some extent taking themselves out of Texas.

One of the latest laws aimed at the octopus is one providing "that any person, who as merchant or agent, sells goods made by a trust or combine, shall be deemed guilty of a felony."

If this law is enforced, there will be a famine in the state of Texas in a very short time, for if the stores stop selling the necessities of our present existence which are manufactured by trusts, there will be a very small assortment of things eatable and wearable for the natives to choose from. And every article sold by the merchant must have a pedigree, or the seller will find the penitentiary yawning for his company for a period of from two to ten years!

Texas is a great state, but its brand of statesmen is unique; they think with their fists.

Municipal Ownership

The final report of the Committee on Investigation of the National Civic Federation Commission on Public Ownership and Operation, has been given to the public. The committee consisted of about twenty members, representing all classes of citizens, and its conclusions while interesting, are qualified by so many allowances for varied conditions, that the question is left, as it was in the beginning, for every community to settle in its own way. The following are some of the conclusions to which a majority of the committee subscribe:

"Public utilities, whether in public or private hands, are best conducted under a system of legalized and regulated monopoly.

"Public utilities, in which the sanitary motive largely enters, should be operated by the public.

"The success of municipal operation of public utilities depends upon the existence in the city of a high capacity for municipal government.

"Franchise grants to private corporations should be terminable after a fixed period and meanwhile subject to purchase at a fair value.

"Municipalities should have the power to enter the field of municipal ownership upon popular vote under reasonable regulation.

"Private companies operating public utilities should be subject to public regulation and examination under a system of uniform records and accounts and of full publicity."

Mr. Walton Clark of Philadelphia, dissents from the findings of his colleagues, and says:

"I am convinced that the condition of the British people, individually or collectively, has not been improved by the municipalization of the industries we have investigated.

"I believe that political and social conditions in the United States are less favorable to the success of municipal ownership than are the same conditions in Great Britain.

"I find this conclusion strengthened by our investigation into municipalized industries in the United States.

"I am convinced that, under American conditions, the system of private ownership of public utilities is best for the citizens and the consumers.

"I recommend State regulation and protection of public service companies, provided by statute, and as far as possible automatic in its application and operation."

Justice in Idaho

The socialistic friends of that choice aggregation of law-breakers, the Western Federation of Miners, have been carrying on a campaign extending over some months, based upon the oft-reiterated assumption that no justice was to be had in the courts, which were controlled by capitalists and the enemies of the down-trodden poor!

A few days ago, in addressing the Haywood jury at Boise, Clarence Darrow told the members of that body that he knew they were prejudiced against his client, the defendant, and intimated that a verdict of guilty would be the only logical result. Instead of devoting his attention to the testimony in making the closing address, he devoted hours to a fiery denunciation of mine owners in particular and of capitalists in general; his whole speech evidently being based upon the iniquitous assumption that there is a state of war existing between capital and labor, and that the whole machinery of justice is arrayed upon the side of capital!

The campaign for the raising of funds with which to defend the accused officers of the "inner circle," was waged upon this idea, and the whole socialistic propaganda, if we may believe the statements of the editors and orators of the party, is based upon the supposition that a perpetual war between the classes is being waged.

The preaching of this doctrine persistently must in the nature of things make converts to the theory, and the converts, if consistently believing these oft-reiterated statements true, will to some extent, at least, carry on the warfare which their imagination creates, outside the pale of the law. And always and again as long as such a theory finds advocates, an "inner circle" of fanatics will revel in crime and feel no compunction of conscience, because they imagine that the cause is "holy."

Now note the sequel to the assertions made in innumerable instances during the campaign mentioned above, that "justice cannot be obtained in Idaho." Haywood is acquitted by a jury and Darrow and the whole aggregation of socialistic sympathizers declare that the judge has been most upright, the jury incorruptible, the prosecuting officers eminently fair, and that the state of Idaho covered itself with honor!

The upright judge declared there never was any evidence to show a conspiracy on the part of any persons to convict the officers of the Federation of Miners, so that another claim of the socialistic partisan falls to the ground. For many months they have been erecting a structure based upon falsehood and depending upon the meanest motives of the human heart for its perpetuity, and at one fell swoop it is dashed into nothingness and proved to have been a fraud.

As an eastern paper remarks: "If socialism was on trial in Idaho, as asserted, then socialism has been proved to be an ass."

NOTICE OF PUBLIC WORK

PUBLIC NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That at its meeting held Wednesday, the 26th day of June, 1907, the Board of Trustees of the City of Glendale adopted an Ordinance, designated as Ordinance No. 50, declaring its intention to order the following improvement to be made, to-wit:

The opening of a street 60 feet in width extending from the Southerly city boundary line, 381 feet Southerly of Ninth street, of the City of Glendale, to Second street in said City, having the Easterly line of Lot 1, of a Subdivision of Lot 34, of Watt's Subdivision and the Easterly line of the Child's Tract as the center line thereof, and extending from Second street Northeastly to Verdugo Road, having as a center line from the intersection of the Easterly line of the Child's Tract with the center line of Second Street a curve to the Northeast, a distance of 501.42 feet, on a radius of 369.20 feet to its point of tangency with a Southwesterly prolongation of the center line of that portion of Sycamore Road immediately East of and adjacent to Verdugo Road; thence Northeastly along said Southwesterly prolongation of the center line of Sycamore Road, a distance of 655.97 feet, to the Westerly line of Verdugo Road; said street, when opened, to be known as CHILDS AVENUE.

Reference is hereby made to said Ordinance on file in the office of the City Clerk of said City for further particulars.

F. R. SINCLAIR,
Street Superintendent of the 11-4w City of Glendale.

As Others See It

The prospects are very flattering that Glendale will soon have another electric railway. Mr. Kuhrt, representing the Huntington system, has agreed to build the new line if the citizens will give a bonus of $20,000 and the right of way. Committees are now at work on the project and report very good success. The new line will be built to Glendale proper and will be of much value to the people of this enterprising town.

It will be remembered that not long ago a spur that was originally built along Fourth street when the present Glendale-Verdugo line was constructed, was unceremoniously torn up between two days, and since then the people have been very bitter toward the promoters of the old line and have been doing everything in their power to get relief.—Valley Press, San Fernando.

To the Yosemite

Until the completion of the Yosemite Valley Railroad, the wonderful valley was 100 miles from anywhere in particular. But as will be seen by the advertisement in this issue, passengers can now travel in comfort to the very portal of the valley with just enough staging at the end of the journey to add a very enjoyable feature to the trip. Passengers leaving Los Angeles at 11:30 p.m., arrive in the valley the next evening at about 6 o'clock.

MARS

(THIRD PAPER)

The simplest explanation to account for the so-called canals, and that which at first suggested itself to observers, is that they are true water courses of some kind; and that a direct transference of water takes place over the planet. M. Perrotin of Nice Observatory said that two facts seemed to support this view: the color of the canals is similar to that of the Martian seas, and they are connected with the seas; never ending in a continent, but always continuing till they emerge into a sea, or meet another canal crossing their course.

Mr. Percival Lowell of Flagstaff, Ariz., however, on continued observation, saw reason to doubt this conclusion. His study of the planet continued over more than a year, and during that time he found that the canals were not always visible; and the invisibility was found to be real and not apparent only; not due to distance or to any obscurity between us and them, but to some inherent property in the canals themselves. At certain seasons they seem to cease to exist, and for aught we can see with our present telescopic powers, they simply are not there.

But they always reappear in exactly the same positions on the planet, and the order of reappearance coincides with the change in the Martian seasons. The visible development of the system follows the melting of the polar snows, and not until that has progressed pretty far do any of the canals become perceptible. Indeed, some months elapse between the apparent departure of the water from the poles and the full development of the canal system. Quoting now from Mr. Lowell's book he says: "In emerging from invisibility into evidence, the canals first make themselves suspected, rather than seen, as broad, faint streaks smoothing the disk. . . . And apart from their extension their growth consists chiefly in the deepening of their tint." In seeking for an explanation of the delay in the appearance of the canals, Mr. Lowell thinks it most likely that what we see is not water, but vegetation, for if the darkening be due to vegetation, time must elapse between the arrival of the water and its perceptible effect—time sufficient for the vegetation to grow. If, therefore, we suppose that what we call a canal, is not the canal proper, but the vegetation along its banks, the observed phenomena stand accounted for. This supposition disposes, incidentally, of the difficulty of conceiving of a canal several miles wide.

Yet another remarkable fact has been observed by Mr. Lowell and his associates at Flagstaff. Dotted all over the so-called continents of Mars are an innumerable number of dark circular or oval spots, appearing always in intimate association with the canals, and constituting so many hubs to which the canals make spokes. There is no spot that has not two or more canals running into it, and there are no canals which do not run into a spot. The spots are therefore part and parcel of the canal system. They are very regular in form, mostly circular but sometimes oval, making their appearance in the same gradual manner as the canals, and deepening in tint with the lapse of time. The majority of them are from 120 to 150 miles in diameter, presenting a certain uniformity in size as well as in shape. In this connection Mr. Lowell says: "They start, it would seem, as big as they are to be, but faint in tone, premonitory shades of their future selves. They then proceed to substantialize by darkening in tint throughout." The inference is that they, like the canals, are areas of vegetation—oases in the Martian deserts, to which are conducted, through the canals, the water from the melting snows. The circular shape of these oases is strictly economic, as is the straightness of the canals, for the circle or the oval are the figures which enclose the maximum area, and if a certain amount of country were to be irrigated, intelligence would dictate the circular form in preference to all others to cover the greatest space with the least labor. Thus the mysterious rendezvousing of the canals at these special points is at once explicable. The whole system, canals and oases, appear thus to be the result of assisted nature, intelligent design.

Mr. Lowell reviews the chain of reasoning on the observed phenomena by which he is led to regard it probable that we see upon the surface of Mars the effects of local intelligence. And here it will be well to make an extensive quotation from the concluding chapter of his book. He says: "In the first place, we find the broad physical conditions of the planet are not antagonistic to some form of life; secondly, that there is an apparent dearth of water upon the planet's surface, and therefore if beings of sufficient intelligence inhabit it, they would have to resort to extensive irrigation to support life; thirdly, that there appears to be a network of markings covering the disk of the planet precisely counterparting what a system of irrigation would look like, and lastly, that there are a series of spots placed where we should expect to find the lands thus artificially fertilized and behaving as such constructed oases should. In short, no part of the planet is allowed to escape the all-pervasive trigonometric spirit, and if this be nature's work, she certainly here seems to run her mathematics into the ground. The details of the explanation, however, will on closer acquaintance be found doubtless quite different from any definite idea we can formulate in the present state of our knowledge, for any Martian life must differ very considerably from our own. Mars being old himself, we know that evolution must be similarly advanced; we may therefore judge any life he may support to be not only relatively, but really older than our own. From the little we can see, such appears to be the case. The evidence of handicraft, if such it be, points to a highly intelligent mind behind it. Irrigation, unscientifically conducted, would not give us such truly wonderful mathematical fitness in the several parts to the whole as we there behold. A mind of no mean order seems to preside over the system we see—a mind certainly of considerably more comprehensiveness than any which preside over the various departments of our own public works. Party politics, at all events, have had no part in them, for the system is world-wide. But to talk of Martian beings is not to mean Martian men and women. . . . And amid the conditions that exist on Mars, so different from those existing on the earth, we may be sure that other organisms have been evolved of which we have no cognizance, and what manner of beings they may be we lack the data even to conceive. For answers to such problems we must look to the future, and whether the human race will ever learn this thing, cannot of course be foretold. We can, however, recognize the fact that mankind is not the sum total of the capabilities of the cosmos. Man is merely this planet's highest production up to date; he does not even gauge the possibilities of the human race. He has been steadily bettering from an immemorial past, and will apparently continue to improve through an incalculable future. Still less does he gauge the universe about him. He merely typifies in an imperfect way what is going on elsewhere, and what, to a mathematical certainty, is in some corners of the cosmos indefinitely excelled. If astronomy teaches anything, it teaches that man is but a detail in the evolution of the universe, and that resemblant, tho diverse details are inevitably to be expected in the orbs around us. He learns that tho he will probably never find his double anywhere, he is destined to discover any number of cousins scattered through space."

Our next paper will, in conclusion of this subject, present some criticism of the canal theory, and the views and opinions of those who do not agree with the enthusiastic advocates of the idea of life on Mars.

The New Electric Railway

The committee having in charge the collection of the bonus for the proposed electric line up Verdugo Road and over to B street, is making satisfactory progress. A number of non-resident property owners remain to be heard from and there is but little doubt as to the amount required being secured.

In some quarters an idea prevails that there is a counter proposition available; but we are unable to verify this idea. On the contrary, there is no business-like counter proposition before our people; no other offer from the railroad company to build a road into Glendale by another route, and nothing should prevent our people from taking hold of this project with an enthusiasm which would ensure its success.

There is no valid reason why anyone having interests in Glendale, particularly along Glendale avenue, and financially able to do so, should not assist this project, provided always that he wishes to see Glendale grow and prosper. It is not a question relating to the present only; but the future should be considered, and we say now with a full knowledge of all the conditions, that if by any lukewarmness on the part of our citizens the proposed project should be allowed to fail, that Glendale, and particularly Glendale avenue, will be the sufferer for years to come.

Boston Old Home Week

Glendale's Representative Captures a Prize

Boston is having a unique celebration. Bostonians the world over have been invited to come home and celebrate, and they have responded from various quarters of the globe in great numbers.

Prizes are offered for those who come from the greatest distance and have been absent the longest time.

Among the prize winners is our well-known fellow townsman, Mr. Charles O. Rich, who left there twenty years ago and came to California direct to Glendale. He gets a prize of $25 in gold. The Boston Journal of July 23d prints an interview with Mr. Rich accompanied by a very good photograph. He is visiting his mother and other relatives and is not yet ready to return. We are glad to hear that he is enjoying himself.
